move. If we were really interested in doing something for these young men, we would be talking about restructuring, maybe demolishing, Kearney and putting together a comprehensive proposal to erect a facility that has all of what is needed for the types of youngsters who will wind up there and we would start giving time and thought and money to some of the types of programs discussed by Senator Engel, Senator Crosby and others. But all this is, is one thing sticking out there like an extra thumb, costing the state $317,000 at this point, then $3,175,000, and I believe that's understated, the first year out, and that amount is not going to remain static. Senator Thompson just got through explaining and demonstrating the way that a project gained several hundred thousand dollars in cost as a result of a delay of a few months. So if this thing gets up and running, we don't know when it will be ready, we don't know really what it's going to do, but this proposal says that a child will stay there 90 days and you should look in the yellow sheet on page 15 at what they tell you is going to be accomplished in these 90 days, which is preposterous. But since it's a politically motivated operation anyway all you do is have to say words. They don't have to have any meaning and there has to be no realistic idea or notion or plan to achieve anything other than provide economic development in the area where this camp will be put in place so the people out there can get some jobs. These children are becoming commodities and my people have a collective recollection of what it means to be a commodity. Other people make money off your person and you don't control your person, and the only interest they have is how much money they can make off you.

SENATOR CUDABACK PRESIDING

SENATOR CUDABACK: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: You're not welcome in their homes. You're not welcome in their schools. But you're welcome there as a means for them to get some jobs and make some money and, I tell you, I made my blunder in the past by not fighting these things tooth and nail, but I don't intend to make it again. And you all can vote down this amendment, but I plan to keep us on this bill long enough to maybe get you to change your mind, and I'm being straightforward with you. I want to bring as much
